Exercising with a partner has benefits

Scores of people insist that exercising with a partner is a great way to remain committed to a fitness regimen, and now research is beginning to support that assertion.

A 2023 study from researchers in Japan published in the Archives of Gerontology and Geriatrics found that exercising both alone and with a partner two or more times a week helped to lower risk of cognitive impairment,

Fun ways to spend the first day of the new year

New Year's Day marks the unofficial culmination of the holiday season, which some feel begins months earlier with Halloween. Retailers have had all sorts of party and decorative goods filling shelves throughout the holiday season, and much emphasis has been placed on celebrating with friends and family.

The revelry that comes on New Year's Eve is hard to match, particularly for those who attend lavish parties or venture to city centers to ring in the new year with others. While January 1 may be a bit more quiet, there are still plenty of ways to enjoy this first day of the year.

Plan a hiking excursion

There's a good chance you have not been out hiking for awhile, with your most recent venture having been a leaf-peeping trip. Enjoy the natural scenery during an entirely different season, with much lighter crowds at parks and on trails. If you've resolved to ex

Host a relaxing brunch

With all the merrymaking the evening before, most people may need a little time to recuperate before heading out. Brunch is a great way to get people fed and help them shake off fatigue from a late night of partying. With a focus on conversation and food, rather than dancing and drinking, this can be an intimate way to set the tone for the new year.

Queue up the movies

The hustle and bustle of the holidays can be exciting yet exhausting. Take an opportunity on January 1 to slow down for perhaps the first time in at least two months. Ask household members to choose their favorite films, then spend the day binge watching movies. Eat leftovers or order in so no one needs to leave the comfort of the sofa.

Adopt a new pet

Many charitable animal groups advise against giving pets as holiday gifts because the idea may be spontaneous and pets require a lot of care. For those who have been thinking of welcoming a pet into the family, this may be a good time to visit an animal shelter (if any are open) or peruse online adoption postings. The slow pace of the post-holiday months might be the ideal time to help an animal get acclimated to a new home.

Go shopping

It may seem like the average person has exhausted all of his or her shopping energy by this time, but post-Christmas sales are great ways to stock up on holiday decor for next year at reduced prices. If stores are open on New Year's Day, shop around for ornaments, lawn figures, lights, and more at steep discounts. Then spend the rest of the day sorting and organizing holiday items and discarding those that have seen better days.

Help at a nonprofit

Volunteer time at a local nonprofit group that delivers meals to homebound locals or one that visits nursing home residents. Start spreading New Year's cheer early on.

New Year's Day is a good time to spend quality time and have fun with loved ones.

Exercising with a partner has benefits

but the risk was decreased by a more significant margin among those who exercised with others. Authors of the study found that the risk of cognitive impairment decreased by more than 29 percent among individuals who worked out with a partner, which was nearly double the percentage reduction (15 percent) among those who exercised alone.

◆◆ NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS ◆◆

Cultivating Gratitude

Improve your well-being with an attitude of gratitude

Resolve in 2023 to be more grateful for the good things in your life, even when it might be a challenge to find them.

Gratitude isn't just a squishy concept to sell motivational posters. It can have real physical and mental health benefits. Harvard Medical School reported that research has linked gratitude with greater happiness. It helps people feel more positive, improve their health, be resilient and build strong relationships.

Psychology Today reported several studies that showed gratitude has many positive life effects. Thanking someone you've just met makes them more likely to seek out a relationship with you. Gratitude reduces the experience of toxic emotions. Writing in a gratitude journal improves sleep. Having a grateful attitude can banish aches and pains. It enhances empathy and reduces aggression.

Gratitude involves acknowledging and appreciating the positive aspects of your life, even amid challenges and difficulties.

Gratitude Activities

Establish a daily gratitude practice. Incorporate gratitude into your routines by doing such things as keeping a gratitude journal, writing thank-you notes or sharing gratitude with loved ones.

Be as specific and detailed as you can. Go beyond generic statements and instead focus on specific people, experiences or things you are grateful for along with the reasons behind your gratitude. For example, instead of telling your spouse, "I'm grateful for you," say something specific such as, "Thank you for always helping me to laugh when I'm feeling down" or "I'm really grateful you always make the coffee in the morning."

Incorporate gratitude into your daily rituals or routines. For example, express gratitude before meals, start or end the day with a gratitude reflection or incorporate gratitude into meditation or prayer practices.

In addition to feeling grateful, express your gratitude through actions. This might involve performing random acts of kindness, volunteering or expressing appreciation to others directly.

Times for Gratitude

Cultivate gratitude during times of difficult or challenging periods. Look for silver linings, lessons or moments of growth within adversity as this can foster resilience and emotional well-being.

Use your gratitude practices to nurture and strengthen relationships. Express your gratitude to your loved ones and acknowledge the positive effect they have on your life.

Practice self-gratitude and compassion. Acknowledge your own strengths, achievements and efforts. Be kind to yourself throughout your personal growth journey.

Gratitude extends beyond material possessions. Appreciate the intangible aspects of life, such as relationships, experiences, nature, personal qualities and moments of joy.

Be consistent in your gratitude practice. Reflect on your gratitude journey on a regular basis. If you keep a gratitude journal, read over past entries. Revisit moments of gratitude. Be mindful about your approach and ways you can expand it.

Cultivating gratitude can have a positive effect on your well-being, relationships and personal growth. Embrace thankfulness as a transformative resolution for the upcoming year!

Make this the year you embark on a transformative journey—literally as well as figuratively.

A resolution to travel more can bring many benefits to your life. Travel can be good for you and the new year is a great time to make plans so that your dreams can become a reality.

Travel is more than just visiting new places; it is a gateway to personal growth, self-discovery and a broader perspective on life. Why resolve to travel? Consider these reasons:

- Cultural enrichment. Experiencing different cultures fosters empathy, tolerance and understanding. It broadens our horizons, challenges our assumptions and expands our knowledge of the world.
- Stress relief and well-being: Travel allows us to disconnect from everyday stressors, rejuvenate our minds and embrace relaxation. It promotes mental and emotional well-being, reducing anxiety and enhancing overall happiness. Some research has found that even thinking about travel can make a person happier for weeks.
- Physical health benefits: People who travel have a lower risk of heart disease. It can boost your immune system and, especially for those with sedentary jobs, can promote physical activity.
- Self-discovery and personal growth: Travel pushes us beyond our comfort zones, encouraging personal growth, self-confidence resilience. It presents opportunities for introspection, self-reflection and self-discovery.

Making it Happen

It's not enough to decide to travel, your resolution needs to be specific and practical. Create a travel bucket list and identify the destinations you yearn to explore. Set achievable goals and prioritize them based on your interests, budget and time availability.

Allocate a portion of your income specifically for travel to start saving for the trip. Explore cost-effective travel options. Is there an expense you are willing to cut in order to travel? If so, identify it and make it happen not as a way of depriving yourself, but as a way of rewarding yourself. Research to secure the best deals on flights, accommodations and activities.

Incorporate travel into your schedule by setting aside dedicated vacation days or planning extended weekends. Break free from the notion that travel is a luxury and recognize it as an essential investment in your well-being.

Types of Travel

Travel holds endless possibilities, from epic adventures to tranquil getaways.

Embark on a solo journey to challenge yourself, develop independence and embrace self-discovery. Be safe and let someone know where you are going, but enjoy the opportunity to spend time with yourself and do the things that you want to do.

Let your travel be an opportunity for cultural immersion. Fully participate in local traditions, festivals and cuisine, interacting with locals to truly experience the essence of a destination.

Discover the beauty of natural wonders through hiking, camping or eco-tourism, reconnecting with the earth and finding solace in serene landscapes.

Combine your passion for travel with social impact by participating in volunteer programs, contributing to local communities and causes.

Embracing a New Year's resolution to travel more is an invitation to adventure. Beyond the stunning landscapes and exciting adventures, travel enriches our lives. Make 2023 a year filled with unforgettable travel experiences that will leave an indelible mark on your soul.

Fun By The Numbers
Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle! SU065310
